

Hannah Stokes

HANNAHSTOKESMUSIC.COM

Hannah Stokes is a singer-songwriter based in Orlando, FL. Influenced by the jazz-infused folk songwriting of Joni Mitchell and Nora Jones mixed with the soul stylings of artists like Lianne La Havas and Emily King, she forges an entrancing sonic landscape to invite you into her inner world. She carries a sultry voice that radiates throughout a room and original songs that explore powerful personal stories, reaching an audience eager to connect with her music.

“Waste Time,” Hannah’s newest single, is a time paradox bossa nova about how trying to not waste your time seems to be the surest way to do just that. Fueled by the rockier 70’s side of Aretha Franklin and the timeless Japanese city pop of Taeko Ohnuki’s classic “Tokai,” Hannah and producer Jordan Morales set out to catch a hyper-human vocal image that gives the listener—through warmth, clarity, and humility—a vehicle to combat the hurry sickness the song serves to defy.

📌 Latest Release

🎵 Listen

📺 Watch

